RENO'S BUSINESS MEN.

The "Commercial Record's" Review of Some of Them.

The Pacific Commercial Record, in its review of Reno and her business men, contains the following:

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK

Is the oldest financial institution in the country, and the only one doing business under the National banking system, the advantages of which to depositors, who can rest easy under the assurance that their monies are absolutely safe and guarded by the protecting arm of Uncle Sam, goes without saying.

The First National Bank opened its doors for business on July 1st, 1880, with a capital stock of $50,000. This has been twice doubled since that time and its capital at present is therefore $200,000, fully paid up, with a reserve fund of $70,000. The officers and directors include many of the prominent citizens of Washoe county. They are D. A. Bender, President; Geo. W. Mapes, Vice-President; C. T. Bender, Cashier, and Geo. H. Taylor, Assistant Cashier. Directors: W. O. H. Martin, A. H. Manning, D. A. Bender, Geo. W. Mapes and C. T. Bender.

The business done by the First National Bank is no doubt the largest of any banking institution in the State. Extensive transactions are carried on with the cattle and sheep men of the adjoining country, as also with the merchants of the town. A general banking business is conducted, exchange and letters of credit are issued on all the principal cities of the United States and Europe and safe deposit boxes rented for the accommodation of persons wishing to place valuables outside of the reach of fire and burglars. The quarters occupied by the bank are commodious, and its interior appointments are elegant and convenient.

JOHN SUNDERLAND.

Perhaps no business house in Reno is more deserving of favorable mention, than that of the above named gentleman. There is certainly no mercantile establishment that furnishes such striking evidence of the refined taste in matters of dress that exists in this community, as does the store of Mr. Sunderland, and the extended business it enjoys. The idea seems to prevail, not only in the East but in many parts of California as well, that the population of Nevada is largely composed of sheep herders, mulleters and cowboys; and that their principal wants in the way of wearing apparel are confined to cheap, coarse clothing, cowhide boots and a sombrero. To persons laboring under this erroneous impression, we would suggest that a visit to either the clothing or the shoe store of Mr. John Sunderland would quickly dispel it. The citizens of Reno and vicinity regard with pardonable pride this really admirable store and elegant stock therein displayed. The Record correspondent, upon hearing so much in praise of this establishment, took occasion to visit it, and experienced no little surprise at what he saw. This emporium of fashionable and useful goods is verily one that would be a credit to any city on the Pacific Coast, not excepting San Francisco.

There are two stores, each 25 feet wide by 120 feet in depth. One of these is stocked with boots, shoes and all descriptions of footwear, while the other is devoted to clothing and gent's furnishings goods, hats and caps, etc. Both stores are elegant in interior design, arrangement and finish. The shelving, fixtures and other wood-work are of California redwood; while in extent, variety, style and elegance of the goods displayed therein, they rival those of the most fashionable stores in the California Metropolis.

It was indeed a revelation to find that there is a demand for such a class of goods in Reno. "I had not supposed that a merchant could sell them at all," the reporter remarked to Mr. Sunderland, the proprietor.

"That is a common, though erroneous idea," that gentleman answered smilingly, "as the real fact is that there is not another town on the coast of the size of Reno in which there is a finer class of goods sold. The people here, at least my customers, know what good goods are. They are willing to pay good prices, but they want value for their money. They do not belong to that class we sometimes hear of, who take it for granted that goods are fine because they are dear. The trade of Reno knows very well what goods are worth. Even those who have heretofore been accustomed to using cheap goods," continued Mr. Sunderland, "are being educated differently now. They are learning that there is money saved in the end by buying a good article and paying a commensurate price."

"Where is the economy," asked the scribe, "in buying a good article when the customer can do with a cheaper one?" "Well, in the first place," was the answer, "a good garment will last twice as long as a cheap one that costs half as much, and is made up in a 'slipshod' way. Besides, the better garment will always look well until it is worn out. Then, what is most important of all, we can afford to sell the better goods at a lower percentage of profit, for the reason that good goods are always salable. There is no 'dead stock,' whereas in cheap goods there are always odds and ends which expose their inferiority after a little handling, and have to be closed out at a loss. For this reason we carry no cheap or shoddy goods at all."

Mr. Sunderland courteously escorted the reporter through the establishment, exhibiting many articles of gentleman's wear, such as elegant silk underwear, worth $30 per suit, English Vaquero underwear, stylish dress and business suits, and numerous other goods that would delight the optics of any lover of fine dress. All kinds of hats and caps of the better quality are carried, including the Dunlap silk hat and the felt goods of the John Selsdon Company, for which John Sunderland is agent.

The same feature characterizes the boot and shoe department. The best goods from the most celebrated Eastern manufacturers, notably those of Philadelphia, were here to be found in all varieties, styles and prices. The shoe store is of the same size as its neighbor, the clothing store—120 feet deep, and to fill the long rows of shelving on each side of this department alone requires an enormous stock. Yet in addition to it, an immense reserve supply in a basement of the same size underneath is also kept. In fact, to have an assortment of the innumerable grades, varieties and sizes of shoes carried by this concern necessitates keeping a stock which a person would hardly expect to find in a town the size of Reno.

The shoe store is as magnificently appointed as is that devoted to clothing. The same class of trade is catered to, and a large assortment of gentlemen's French calf, hand-sewed shoes, at from $10 to $12 per pair, is kept. There is no other town on the coast, in proportion to its size, where more hand-sewed shoes are sold than are handled in this establishment. In the class of goods referred to, Mr. Sunderland may be said to control the business not only of Reno but of the State. His trade extends to Carson, Virginia City, and the surrounding country. He has established the reputation of keeping that class of goods, and does not make an effort to secure the cheaper trade.

Mr. John Sunderland has been in Nevada since 1862, and for the past twenty years has been in business in Reno. He is a shrewd business man, quick to discern the wants of the trade, and his purchases are made accordingly and judiciously. He is enterprising and energetic, and attends closely and carefully to his extensive business. In addition to these characteristics, he is honorable and straightforward in all his transactions. He has the good will and confidence not only of his trade, but of the wholesalers with whom he deals, and amongst whom he enjoys an unlimited credit.

FOLSON AND WELLS.

The name of this firm is one that is familiar to the residents of Nevada and Eastern California, and particularly to those living in that section of these States for which Reno owing to its unequalled railroad and other facilities, is and must remain the natural shipping and supply point. A fact that has been elsewhere referred to in this edition is that the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, in order to foster and promote a wholesale and jobbing business in Reno, have so arranged their rates of transportation to this point, that the difference between the freight rates on car-load shipments and those on smaller quantities is very considerably in favor of the former. This is a wise concession beyond a doubt, as merchants of capital and ability are thus encouraged to buy merchandise in large quantities, and reach out for the trade of this locality, which would otherwise go to San Francisco. This policy stimulates commercial enterprise in the State and encourages local dealers, and in no place is this more manifest than here in Reno. The manufacturers and wholesale dealers of San Francisco likewise sanction this policy, as they prefer to deal with a few responsible wholesale houses, to having small accounts scattered all over the State. The firm of Folson & Wells devote their attention particularly to that class of trade. Their stock for convenience sake may be said to consist of hardware, agricultural implements and groceries, yet they are wide awake, alive to the wants of the community, and may, more properly speaking, be said to deal in all lines which, with ample capital, they can buy in car-load lots and handle with profit to themselves, and corresponding advantage to the trade. This firm is possessed of ample means and capital. They take advantage of every discount; pay cash for all goods bought, and are by no means timid about purchasing in large quantities, whenever an advantage or "shaving" is to be obtained thereby. Sugars, for instance, are bought in quantities direct from the refiners, and the wholesalers' prices thus secured. This, together with the advantage in freight rates obtained by shipping in car-load lots, enables them to offer the retailer of the country tributary to Reno as good if not better terms than he could secure in San Francisco or Sacramento; and being near at hand, they can supply him promptly with goods at such times and in such quantities as his business requires.

The establishment of Folson & Wells is in the Masonic Building. It is large and commodious, and affords ample room for carrying on a very extensive trade. To the rear is a warehouse in which such bulky goods as nails, flour, etc., both of which are bought in car-load lots, are kept. Alfalfa seed, in which article this firm probably does more than all the local firms together, is likewise kept in this warehouse. Of this commodity, during the season, their sales average between twenty-five and thirty tons. On the opposite side of the street this firm has an iron ware-house, and near the railroad, a short distance from the store, is their oil storehouse. The whole establishment is one which speaks in emphatic terms of the resources and commercial enterprise of Reno, and which would be creditable to a much larger town.

This business was established in Reno six years ago by Messrs. D. S. Gallatin and L. D. Folson, prior to which time they had been for nine years engaged in the hardware business in Gold Hill. Mr. S. O. Wells became a copartner in the business three years ago, since when it has continued under the style of Folson & Wells.

Excursion to Truckee.

Next Sunday the Reno Baseball Club will run an excursion train to Truckee. They have chartered cars and put the round trip price down to $2. The train will leave Reno at 7:30 A. M.; returning, leave Truckee at 7 P. M. This will give excursionists an opportunity of either witnessing the ball game, which no doubt will be exciting, or visiting the beautiful Donner lake and points of interest. The company will be an orderly one, and an enjoyable time the result.

AN AGRICULTURAL COUNTRY.

The Possibility of the Truckee Basin—Irrigation and Crops.

The Truckee Republican has the following concerning its future agricultural prospects:

A company of Government surveyors were in town Thursday night and are now in this vicinity engaged in the work of ascertaining the feasibility of storing water for irrigation purposes. The work is being done by the U. S. Geological Survey, for which Congress recently made a large appropriation. The plan is to create storage reservoirs of the catchment basins in the mountains, saving the water that goes to waste in the Spring and by means of ditches to convey it to the dry and unproductive lands in Nevada. The corps of surveyors are now measuring the volume of water in the various streams in order to ascertain the amount of water wasted. Yesterday they measured Prosser Creek. The work is an important one and one which may effect great changes in the destinies of this section of the country. The object of the work thus far seems to be the reclaiming of lands in Nevada, and the idea of making productive any lands in the mountains seems not to have been thought of as yet. The question suggested is, why cannot the mountains and be made productive by a system of irrigation? There are vast bodies of almost level land scattered through the mountains in this vicinity, which at present are only producing a growth of young pines and sagebrush. This land could be easily irrigated and is located near streams of water. There is a large tract between Truckee and Martine Creek, and between Truckee and Martine Creek, also along Prosser Creek and the Little Truckee river. It has always been thought that this land was only fit for coyotes to run over, but as a matter of fact it is good land and equal to most of the sagebrush land of Nevada. It is true that the climate is not adapted to the production of cereals, but there is no reason in the world why it cannot be made to produce, with irrigation, beautiful crops of natural grasses or grain for stock purposes. We understand Dr. Curless is about to experiment in this direction and has sown twenty acres of grain on the flat near Martine Creek and will irrigate it this year. Should he secure a good crop of hay we confidently expect to see a large area cultivated next year and in the course of time hay growing and stock raising will be an important industry in this vicinity. If the Government constructs irrigation ditches through the mountains large tracts of land could be brought into cultivation. There are several thousand tons of hay consumed in this vicinity, every pound of which comes from distant places, which, could it be produced near at home, would greatly reduce its cost to consumers here, and at the same time would support a population in the business of producing it. Could the stock raising industry flourish and give a permanency to the community which lumbering does not give. To a person with a prophetic vision the time seems to be coming when agriculture will be practiced in the Truckee basin, building up, one might say, an entirely new community.

Who Stole the Bullion.

With regard to C. W. Ladd, recently acquitted in Eureka for stealing a bar of bullion, from the Eureka Co., the Sentinel says: "The people of Eureka are now asking, 'Who stole the bullion?'—Lancaster Review. It is no longer an open question. We know."

Ladd does not deny that he appropriated Eureka Co. bullion, but claims that he was only a small factor in the business. If this is so, who were his confederates? Ladd, while in his "cups" in a Main street saloon, a few days ago, said some very damaging things about some people in this community. Ladd says Hank Donnelly is the only honest man in the outfit. Who is the outfit? They—Ladd and Grant—skipped by the light of the moon by the "backboard route."

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. Feb. 21-17-ly.

Base Ball.

The Republican says: Arrangements have been made for the opening of the baseball season in Truckee and the first game will be played on June 2nd, the contesting sides being the Reno and Truckee. Some organizers a club last week and accepted the proposition to play here against the local club. Both clubs have some good players, and a close and interesting game may be expected.

WHAT ON EARTH

Is the reason people will not, can not or do not see any difference in cheap nostrums put up by cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits, rather than take a moderate amount of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at "real price"? No matter how the world is giving such unparalleled satisfaction for purifying the blood as BLOOD PURIFIER AND BLOOD MAKER, and every bottle that does not do its work will cost you nothing.
